MISCELLANEOUS.

From the German of Sallet. THE FALLEN STAR. Know ye what it meaneth. When looking up on high, Ye see a star deserting

The regions of the sky? Those orbs above us, shedding
Their softened light around,
Are myriad bands of angels,
With wreaths of glory crown'd. All true and faithful warders,

Wide scattered thro' the sky, On earth whatever passes, They mark with watchful eye. And when, within our borders, In fervent faith and love. A good man, bow'd by sorrow,

Looks up for aid above; And prays unto the Father. In agony of woe, Then quickly there departeth A messenger below,

Who glides with beam so cheering, Within the silent room, And soothes to gentle slumber The mourner's heavy gloom This, this, is what it meaneth, When looking up on high,

Ye see a star deserting The region of the sky. [Lit. World.

LINING OUT. An aged minister was officiating for the first time at a public service of a congregation in Georgia, who had been accustomed to having "hymns lined," as it is termed.
